The Mulberry Centre is west London's walk-in cancer support and information service & has been open since July 2001.

Despite being set in the grounds of West Middlesex Hospital there is no postcode or hospital boundary, everyone is welcome.

There is an extensive library of information leaflet, books, journals, videos about all the different cancer sites which can be accessed for information regarding medical treatment and complementary therapies. The library is open to anyone with a concern or interest in cancer.

Wendy Thomas, switchboard operator at Westlink House, sells donated books and other items to raise money for the centre & on 9th march presented Rita Wilson (pictured above) with a cheque for £415 being the amount raised since October last year.
